Individual Contribution – Pampered Pets Team Project

Student: Abinel Madzivire
Role: Chief Editor, Operations Manager and Visual Designer
Project: Pampered Pets Security and Risk Management Report

My responsibilities within the Pampered Pets team project focused on editorial coordination, operational quality control, visual presentation and academic integrity.

As Chief Editor, I was responsible for ensuring that the contributions of different team members were integrated into a coherent report with a consistent academic voice. My assigned duties included preparing a concise introduction and conclusion, with a combined target of approximately 150 words, and checking the logical progression of the report.

As Operations Manager, I was responsible for monitoring compliance with the strict 1,000-word limit. This required reviewing the overall structure, identifying unnecessary repetition and ensuring that the final document remained concise without losing essential analysis.

As Visual Designer, I was tasked with developing the project timeline or Gantt chart to illustrate the planned transition stages and their sequence.

I also held responsibility for checking Harvard-style in-text citations and the reference list, including ensuring that the required Hancock et al. (2024) paper was appropriately integrated into the report.

These responsibilities positioned me as the team's final editorial and quality-assurance reviewer. Evidence of my contribution should include the completed introduction and conclusion, final word-count review, project timeline, reference list and relevant team communications.
